Race Point Publishing Submission Guidelines

Race Point publishes illustrated books, calendars, kits, journals and stationery items on a variety of subjects ranging from art, cooking and crafts to entertainment, performing arts and the natural sciences. We're pleased to look over your proposal, and if your idea fits into our focus areas we will contact you for more details. Please familiarize yourself with our products to ensure your material is appropriate.

Submissions are usually around five pages, and need to contain the following information:

1. A paragraph introducing yourself (the author/designer). This will include:

- Background information explaining your qualifications for writing a book on the subject
- Information on any published book(s) you have authored
- Information about the publisher, publication date, and the sales figures for each book

2. A paragraph offering an overview of the proposed idea/concept. This will include:

- The subject matter
- The audience
- The competition
- What elements of this book will make it stand out in the market

3. An outline or table of contents. This will include:

- An approximate number of chapters, the number of projects to be featured, etc.
- A sentence or two that describes the material planned for each chapter or project listed in the table of contents.

4. Your ideas for the type of visual materials to accompany the text and whether you will provide them.

- Photos
- Illustrations
- Charts or other support material

5. Also include brief marketability information. This will include:

- The main competition for the book
- The audience for the book (e.g.: crafters, handwork aficionados, home improvement do-it-yourselfers, outdoor enthusiasts, pet owners, etc.)

To Send Proposal by Postal Mail
Send a package containing the required information to:

Race Point Publishing
142 West 36th Street, 4th Floor
New York, NY 10018
Attention: Acquisitions Editor

To Send Proposal by Email
State in the subject window: BOOK PROPOSAL
Address your email to: jeannine.dillon@quartous.com